Thanks to everyone who worked to make this possibility a reality...
Dear Friends,

The year 2007 will long be remembered as a year when a vast vision became reality. Together, we worked to create Atrium Medical Center, our new 21st century hospital, with expanded medical and surgical capabilities and dramatically enhanced amenities for patient comfort and care. And we “partnered with the best” to open the Ann and Arthur Bidwell Surgery Center, the Behavioral Health Pavilion and the Dayton Children’s Specialty Care Center – Warren County.

Later this year, Premier Health Campus – Middletown will welcome the Atrium Family YMCA and Avalon by Otterbein at Atrium, a skilled nursing community. In 2009, Greentree Health Science Academy will open its doors to high school and college students seeking hands-on training in high-demand health careers.

What you see in this annual report is just a small representation of the many possibilities that became reality in 2007—through your giving and the contributions of others to Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation, the philanthropic arm of Atrium Medical Center.

As you turn these pages, let your mind play with the question “What if?” What if the dreamers hadn’t dreamed of a better healthcare reality for their loved ones and neighbors? What if our generous supporters hadn’t caught the vision of state-of-the-future care? I assure you, none of these realities—these significant improvements to care—could have happened on their own.

Finally, I encourage you to consider the best “what if”. What if we continue this momentum in the months and years to come? What can happen in our communities if we keep dreaming … and giving … and creating new and better solutions to the healthcare challenges we and future generations will face?

Let’s keep working together toward a healthier tomorrow.

Sincerely,

Douglas W. McNeill, FACHE
President and CEO
Atrium Medical Center
What stands between a possibility and a reality? Energy. Creativity. Determination. And yes, dollars. These are the catalysts that transform what can be into what is.

At Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation, 2007 was a year when these four catalysts came together in powerful ways—and made things happen for our communities.

We saw the energy of hospital leadership, staff and volunteers who worked as a team to open Atrium Medical Center, turning a seven-year dream into a lifesaving reality for southwest Ohio families.

We marveled at the creativity of those who invested countless hours in making Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation’s All that Glitters gala a night to remember and a successful fundraiser for our new Heart Center.

We watched the determination of Foundation leaders and grassroots community members who would not rest until the message of the need for advanced heart services resounded throughout the region.

And we were grateful as nearly 1,200 generous donors stepped forward to contribute more than $5 million to the Advancing Care for a Healthier Community capital campaign—many with first-time major gifts to the Foundation. In April 2008, we announced that we exceeded our campaign goal of $4.5 million, just before the new Heart Center welcomed its first patients and families in June.

You—the people of this region who gave energy, creativity, determination and yes, dollars to make a difference—were the catalyst that turned possibilities into realities. And we at Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation want to thank you.

We also assure you that every gift to Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation goes to work right here in your local region, building a healthier community for your family, friends and employees. Every gift is used for its designated intent.

Numerous possibilities are still before us. Thank you for your continued support as we work to make them realities.

Gratefully yours,

Linda C. Baxter    Candice DeClark Peace

Reality: LIFESAVING CARDIAC CARE
 Supporting state-of-the-art cardiac care has always been a family affair for Walter H. Roehll, Jr., MD, medical director of cardiology services, and his wife, Mary Lou.

Since 1962, when he joined the Middletown Regional Hospital medical staff, Dr. Roehll has led the charge for enhanced cardiac services—championing the use of defibrillators when few hospitals had them, helping to create one of the nation’s first Coronary Care Units in a community hospital, pioneering the use of cardiac rehabilitation after a heart attack, and assisting in creating many new services, such as nuclear cardiology, a heart failure center, and now, open-heart surgery and interventional cardiology.

With a vision ahead of him and his family squarely behind him, Dr. Roehll provided critical leadership for the Advancing Care for a Healthier Community capital campaign. “We’ve always been a close family,” remarked Mary Lou, “and the hospital has been part of the family.”

In honor of their loving family, the Roehlls made a significant gift for the new Heart Center at Atrium Medical Center. The contribution is in recognition of their children—Debi, Lori, John and Geoff—grandchildren and great-grandchildren, but also in memory of Dr. Roehll’s parents, Catherine and Walter Roehll, MD.

“My dad practiced internal medicine at Middletown Regional Hospital from 1923 to 1967,” Dr. Roehll reflected. “He was a wonderful, compassionate doctor.”

“Every day, patients at the hospital had a race to see who could put a flower in his lapel,” recalled Mary Lou. “Patients just loved him.”

In December, the Roehll family gathered to dedicate the Mary Lou & Walter H. Roehll, Jr., MD, Cardiac Family Room—a warm, welcoming space within the Heart Center. “Families suffering from the impact of heart disease are anxious about their loved ones,” said Dr. Roehll. “I’m glad our family could help provide a place with a patient-friendly, healing environment, where loved ones can be together, talk together, and provide support that can help a family member heal.”
Role models are important to Steve Hightower. His life and career were shaped by positive role models who instilled in him a solid work ethic, a penchant for innovation and a desire to "give back." “Find out what successful people do, and do that,” is his motto.

“I’m convinced that role modeling is the strategy by which we pass on hope and legacies,” explained Hightower, president and CEO of Franklin-based Hightowers Petroleum, a nationwide distributor of petroleum products.

It should come as no surprise, then, that three community role models inspired Hightowers Petroleum’s contribution to the Advancing Care for a Healthier Community capital campaign. The company’s generous gift was made in honor of Steve’s parents, Yudell and Elsie Hightower, founders of the Hightower family business.

“My father worked 18- to 20-hour days at Armco Steel while building his own business. The fact that we’re doing new and innovative things today is because we began with a strong base,” he says. Elsie worked alongside her husband, managing the day-to-day financial operations.

Now in their 70s, Yudell and Elsie continue to serve the community. “My father spends a lot of time visiting and encouraging people at the hospital and in homes. He has a good heart. He’s one of a kind, without a bad word to say about anyone.”

Hightower points to Doug McNeill, Atrium Medical Center president and CEO, as the third inspiration for the gift. "I like role models who inspire me to do more, and Doug McNeill is that kind of individual. I’ve seen Doug inspire the community to do and become more by transforming Middletown Regional Hospital and its image, by successfully negotiating key partnerships, and by delivering to the community a final product they can see, touch and take pride in."

Hightower believes positive examples like these will have a far-reaching impact on the region. “When people see success being achieved by someone they know, they recognize that success is possible and believe it can happen to them, too.”
If the strength of a building lies in its foundation, then Atrium Medical Center owes much to Baker Concrete Construction. As a subcontractor on the Atrium construction project, Baker handled all the concrete work—from foundation to superstructure—for the new facility.

But the company’s commitment to “foundation building” didn’t stop there.

Last year Baker Concrete made a generous gift to help lay a strong foundation for care at our new Heart Center—a gift that sprang from a “history of helping people,” according to Mike Schneider, Baker Concrete vice president.

“We made a donation to this hospital as a gift to the local community—the community we’re a part of,” Schneider explained.

Headquartered in Monroe, Ohio, Baker has its roots in nearby Oxford, where founder Dan Baker and his two brothers got their start laying patios and driveways. “Today we’re one of the largest concrete specialty contractors in the country,” said Schneider. “We do a lot of big projects—that’s our forte. But Dan Baker still believes in giving back to the local community in terms of our time, talent and treasure.”

After touring Atrium Medical Center at the open house, Schneider commented, “It’s a tremendous facility, not like any hospital I’ve ever been in. Most hospitals are about a very sterile environment, architecturally. Atrium is so warm—so much more welcoming.”

Schneider and his colleagues at Baker are equally enthused about the hospital’s potential to fuel fresh economic development in the region. “The partnerships Atrium has created with various entities make it a magnet for the area,” he said. “And as new people move into the area, the fact that they don’t have to worry about medical services is a huge plus. The Heart Center alone is a major capability Atrium now offers that wasn’t here before.”

Reflecting on Atrium’s construction, Schneider concluded, “It was one of the best run projects we’ve ever been associated with. We were fortunate to be a part of building it, and we support it because it’s the right thing to do.”
Cardiac patients and their families will benefit from stronger care at the new Heart Center, thanks to major gifts from the James M. Cox Foundation of Atlanta and the Middletown Journal, a Cox Ohio Publishing affiliate.

Established by Middletown-area native James Cox, three-time Ohio governor and founder of Cox Enterprises, a major media company, “the James M. Cox Foundation serves all of the communities where Cox properties are located,” said Karla Garrett Harshaw, Cox Ohio’s vice president of community development.

Ann Hoffman, former publisher of the Middletown Journal and current publisher of a Cox newspaper in North Carolina, learned about Atrium Medical Center and its plans for advanced heart services during tours of the new facility.

“Obviously, the entire Atrium complex is a very positive thing for the community—not just for Middletown, but for all of Butler and Warren counties,” she remarked.

“Cox has a philosophy of being very good stewards in communities where we have newspapers and other divisions. We’re supportive of projects that improve quality of life in our markets—so obviously, supporting Atrium Medical Center wasn’t a difficult choice for us.”

Karla Garrett Harshaw joined Hoffman in presenting to Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation a $37,500 grant from the James M. Cox Foundation and a pledge of $12,500 from the Middletown Journal, saying, “The Heart Center at Atrium Medical Center is a wonderful facility with all the expertise needed for area families who are coping with an acute heart incident. It will be a great asset to the community.”
Atrium Auxiliary Middletown

“We’re happy to be helping the hospital in our own special way.”

Volunteers are not only the unseen backbone of Atrium Medical Center, together they also stand as the second largest donor in Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation history. “The Auxiliary has given more than $1.5 million to the Foundation to date, including a $100,000 gift to the Advancing Care for a Healthier Community capital campaign,” said Jessica Woodard, Foundation development coordinator. “It’s hard to imagine a day here without our volunteers and their commitment to patients.”

More than 200 members strong, the Auxiliary raises funds for hospital projects through flower, book and jewelry sales—and through the Hilltop Gift Shop, a hospital tradition for more than 50 years. Volunteers Darlene Abney and Joyce Burnett manage the gift shop, which underwent a total transformation with the move to Atrium Medical Center. “We love it,” Abney said of the new shop with its welcoming décor and larger square footage.

“We’re here to serve hospital employees, who work long hours and appreciate the convenience of a gift shop, and we’re here to serve the public,” explained Burnett. “Patients’ loved ones are under stress and they often need to get away and talk to someone. We’re here to listen.” Proceeds from the shop, which last year exceeded $75,000, support hospital services, technology and medical scholarships.

The Auxiliary’s generous gift to the Advancing Care capital campaign was commemorated with the naming of a large, second-floor reception area at Atrium Medical Center. The Atrium Auxiliary Middletown Family Room is a comfortable place for families waiting while their loved ones have surgery or treatment. “We think it’s important to give back to the community,” Burnett said on behalf of fellow Auxilians. Abney added, “We’re happy to be helping the hospital in our own special way.”
Reality: EXPANDED SERVICE FOR WOMEN AND CHILDREN
THE SPURLINO FAMILY FOUNDATION

“It’s easy to see the hospital doing well and think they don’t have any needs—but they do.”

Dayton residents Jim and Heather Spurlino have a big heart for children. That’s why, when considering a gift to Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation, they inquired about needs at the hospital’s Maternal Child Health Center.

“Our family’s foundation has mostly concentrated on organizations that are concerned about children’s well-being,” said Spurlino, president of Middletown-based Spurlino Materials. On a tour of the Maternal Child Health Center, the Spurlinos “saw firsthand some of the center that may not be as high profile or headline-grabbing as cardiac care, but were equally as urgent,” Jim recalled.

“We also met Dr. Greg Siewny; Janet Majors, director of women’s services; and others who are clearly passionate about their work, which is helping children and expectant mothers who need medical services but can’t afford them.”

As the primary care provider for more than 12,000 women and children, most of whom face financial circumstances beyond their control, the Maternal Child Health Center offers low-cost sick and well child visits, a prenatal/gynecology clinic, free immunizations and more.

The Spurlino Family Foundation’s generous gift helped replace outdated ultrasound equipment to provide more accurate fetal growth/development screening, and it purchased much-needed technology for vision testing and asthma treatment. The funds also allowed the center, which was formerly closed on Wednesdays for budgetary reasons, to open on Wednesday afternoons.

“We’re here for anyone who’s fallen on rough times, and with the economy as it’s been, we’re bursting at the seams,” said Donna Parson, manager. Opening the center an extra day helps ensure that sick children don’t have to wait for care and that expectant women receive timely intervention to improve pregnancy outcomes.

Reflecting on his family’s contribution, Spurlino remarked, “It’s easy to drive past the hospital, see it doing well and think they don’t have any needs—but they do. Thankfully, the Foundation represents those needs well.”
Reality: HOPE FOR GRIEVING PARENTS
THE HEAL GARDEN (HELP ENDURE A LOSS)

Some gifts to Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation help fund high-tech equipment to save lives. Other gifts help save emotional lives, says Sheree Young, RN, director of Atrium Medical Center’s unique HEAL Program.

Through counseling and support, HEAL (Help Endure A Loss) helps grieving families put the pieces of life back together after the death of an infant or child. Caring HEAL personnel also work to provide tangible ways to treasure and remember the child.

In 2007, Foundation donors helped establish a new HEAL Garden at Premier Health Campus – Middletown. Sponsored by the medical staff, the garden’s focal point is an Angel of Hope statue inspired by the bestselling book The Christmas Box. “In the book, a woman mourns the loss of her child at the base of an angel monument,” explained Young. “The angel statue has become a worldwide symbol for bereaved loved ones who need a place to heal. We’re honored and grateful to have one in Middletown.”

“We asked the Middletown Regional Hospital medical staff if they’d be willing to fund the project as their last official contribution as MRH physicians,” said Diana Small, MD, chief of pediatrics, who championed the project with Young. The response was overwhelming. Physicians contributed $14,500 for the statue. Additional gifts from The Children’s Medical Center of Dayton, Cincinnati Children’s Hospital Medical Center, Children’s Medical Center of Middletown and others have purchased benches and plantings, and will endow the garden’s maintenance.

Brad and Kendra Klausing of Springboro say you can’t put a price tag on such a gift to area families. In 2006, they lost their only child, 5-month-old Aubrey, to sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS). Friends put the couple in touch with Young, who came and made three-dimensional molds of Aubrey’s tiny hands and feet to help preserve her memory. The Klausings soon joined a HEAL support group, which meets at Atrium Medical Center.

“You can’t explain the power of being in a room where everyone knows what you’re going through without your having to say a word,” said Kendra. “We try to focus on all the good times we had with Aubrey, but we still need that emotional release.”

The Klausings believe the Angel of Hope will provide that and more for grieving families. Said Kendra, “It’s a visible, permanent reminder that our children were here and are not forgotten.”
Reality: QUALITY CARE FOR LOW-INCOME FAMILIES
Butler County Community Health Consortium

“We really appreciate the support we receive from the Foundation.”

A growing population of uninsured and underinsured households is the primary focus of the Butler County Community Health Consortium (BCCHC). With health centers in Middletown and Hamilton, BCCHC provides comprehensive primary care, preventive healthcare and related social services to those without insurance or the financial means to pay for the care they need.

“There is an increasing demand for our services,” said Ashley Wladysh, BCCHC community relations specialist. “With more than 40,000 on Medicaid and 30,000 uninsured in Butler County alone, we’re an important part of the ‘safety net’ for this area.”

This past year Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation contributed $150,000 to help the Butler County Community Health Consortium meet the rising demand for high-quality, low-cost medical services. In addition to funding prescription assistance for low-income families, the grant enabled the consortium to add a new full-time physician to serve the community’s most vulnerable. Family practitioner Shazia Kahn, MD, now sees patients at the BCCHC Middletown health center.

“In 2007 we served nearly 7,000 patients with more than 18,000 office visits, as compared to 4,000 patients and 11,000 visits in 2006,” said Wladysh. Without BCCHC, she emphasized, these patients would go without care or turn to the local emergency room, creating obvious drawbacks for the community.

“Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation has been instrumental to BCCHC in helping us meet these needs with quality and compassion,” Wladysh concluded. “We really appreciate the support we receive from the Foundation through its donors in the community. We think they do a phenomenal job.”
“It was an extraordinary evening—the most intimate event for 900 people I’ve ever attended,” said Catherine M. Myers, U.S. Bank senior vice president and a guest at Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation’s 2007 All That Glitters Gala.

“It was probably one of the most exciting nights Middletown had seen in a long time,” said Sarah Kaup, co-chair of the event with her husband, Gary. “It was a work of love for our community.”

The picture-perfect night began just as the sun—as if cued by event planners—cast its setting glow on the gleaming windows of the new Atrium Medical Center. Gala participants, who were among the community’s first inside the completed facility, enjoyed cocktails and hors d’oeuvres and perused the many items up for bid in a silent auction before convening inside a large tent for dinner.

The after-dinner program paid tribute to three true community heroes whose lifetime contributions to the hospital and region were deemed exceptional. Former hospital and health system board member Wilbur Cohen and his wife, Mary Jean, a longtime hospital volunteer, received the 2007 Community Hero Award. Beloved pediatrician and former medical staff president Ronald Oches, MD, was honored with the 2007 Physician Hero Award.

Thanks was given to major sponsors Skanska Shook, Barnitz Fund-Chase, Flowers by Roger and many other generous sponsors who assisted in underwriting the evening’s expenses. The unforgettable event, which concluded after dessert and dancing in the hospital, raised $55,000 for the new Heart Center.

“Our teams did a great job in putting the gala together,” remarked Doug McNeill, president and CEO of Atrium Medical Center. “The event exceeded our expectations.”

“We had an incredible committee,” Kaup agreed. “Everyone worked so well together and had fun together, even with all the long hours, and I think it showed in the final product.”

WARREN COUNTY FOUNDATION SUPPORTS ATRIUM

Enhancing the quality of life of Warren County residents is the mission of the Warren County Foundation. "Warren County is a wonderful place to live and work," said Jim Bliss, the foundation’s vice president of development, “but only because of the people and organizations that are working hard to keep it that way and to make it even better.”

Recognizing Atrium Medical Center as an organization that is actively fulfilling that goal, both the Warren County Foundation board of trustees and its grants committee voted unanimously to make a generous grant toward the new Heart Center.

“We had a great feeling about the whole campus and what it brings to the community—and the heart of it all is Atrium Medical Center,” Bliss explained, adding, “it was such an excellent fit with our mission of improving quality of life that we were happy to help.”

NURSING SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENT RELIES ON “HANDS, EYES AND HEART” – SUE FAULKNER, RN, BSN

After 32 years of nursing, Sue Faulkner, RN, BSN, still has the desire to learn and grow, professionally and personally. In December she completed her Bachelor of Science in Nursing at Miami University through Atrium Medical Center’s continuing education program.

Certified in oncology and medical surgical nursing, "Sue is an informal leader among the oncology team at The Compton Center," according to one colleague who nominated her for the award. "She practices not only the science of nursing, but also the art."

In November Faulkner received the 2007 Cameos in Caring award for her significant contribution to quality patient care. The award included a nursing scholarship made possible by the Orr Foundation for Nursing Excellence, established through a major bequest to Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation by sisters Nadine and Beryl Orr.

Faulkner used the funds to travel to El Salvador, her sixth medical mission trip to that country. Serving in a mountain village with no diagnostic testing and limited medications, Sue was amazed at how much she could provide "with just my hands, eyes and heart. We arrive with just our stethoscopes, and that’s it," she explained.

Whether working in El Salvador or at The Compton Center, by listening, educating and building relationships, Sue practices the healing art of nursing. "We [nurses] remind people that someone cares—that they’re not forgotten.”

RONALD MCDONALD HOUSE CHARITIES EASES FEAR OF EMERGENCIES

An emergency room can be an intimidating place for a child. But thanks to Ronald McDonald House Charities of Greater Cincinnati, children visiting the Emergency Trauma Center (ETC) at Atrium Medical Center will have more reasons to enjoy the experience than to fear it.

A recent grant provided funds to equip a cheerful children’s play area within the ETC. The grant purchased a flat-screen TV with children’s programming, two video game stations, interactive play cubes, colorful ceiling murals, toy wagons and more.

“Ronald McDonald House Charities is all about children and their well-being—finding ways we can make things better for them,” explained local McDonald’s owner-operator Ed Wernet. Partnering with Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation to create a place just for kids was “an easy call for us,” he said. “Parents visiting the hospital are under stress, but if their child is happy and able to burn off a little energy, it allows them to focus on getting the care they need.”

WAL-MART FOUNDATION FUNDS VISION SCREENING

“Many children have eye problems that can lead to learning delays or loss of vision if not detected and treated in time,” explained Jim Hollenbeck, assistant manager. Designed for children as young as 6 months of age, the new equipment will serve children who are developmentally delayed or too young to read an eye chart. Said Hollenbeck, “Wal-Mart is pleased to help provide this important healthcare service to our community.”

EMPLOYEES HAVE HEART

Through tours and training, Middletown Regional Hospital (MRH)/Atrium Transition Guides played a valuable role in helping MRH employees adapt to a new work environment at Atrium Medical Center. Through their fundraising activities, they became a major donor to Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation.

Tasked with providing orientation at Atrium, the Transition Team also worked to find ways for employees to remember MRH. In September they hosted the MRH Farewell Celebration, which included a picnic, a final walk around the hospital, games for children and a raffle. “Forty MRH departments donated awesome gift baskets for our raffle; the entire community was involved,” said Julie Turner, education program coordinator.

The team also assembled a Recipes to Remember cookbook, still on sale in the education department. Together, these projects raised more than $5,000 for the Heart Center.

“So many people deserve credit for what we’ve accomplished,” Turner said of her peers on the Transition Team. “A lot of time and effort was donated to helping us in our move to Atrium. It’s a great group!”

Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation 2007 Annual Report

donors turn POSSIBILITIES into REALITIES
SKANSKA SHOOK BUILDS COMMUNITY

From the onset of the construction of Atrium Medical Center, Skanska Shook was committed not only to managing construction of the new hospital, but also to becoming a supporter of the Butler/Warren county region and Mid-Miami Healthcare Foundation.

“We pledged our support to community organizations, local subcontractors and vendors,” said Stephen E. Risner, project director. “We challenged our subcontractor/vendor base to help us build this project cost-efficiently and to meet the high quality standards expected by the hospital and the community.”

To help finance the project, Skanska Shook organized two fundraiser golf outings to benefit the Foundation. Together, the 2006 and 2007 golf tournaments raised more than $20,000 for the Heart Center.

“The challenge we sent out to our subcontractors and vendors was answered with enthusiasm and open pockets,” said Risner. “Skanska Shook is very pleased to have been selected as the construction management team for Atrium Medical Center and even more pleased to have had the opportunity to work with the dedicated hospital management team, the City of Middletown, loyal supporters and all the subcontractors and vendors in making this a win-win for everyone.”
